The Natural Fancy Deep Brown-Orange Diamond Necklace

A magnificent Fancy Deep Brown-Orange diamond from South Africa is suspended from a classic Cartier necklace featuring another 100 carats of Collection Color (D, E, F-color) diamonds.

“Orange diamonds are among the rarest of the rare,” said Joe Padulo, CEO of Padulo Privé, and a consultant to high-end jewelers and luxury brands. “This remarkable orange stone is detachable from its Cartier necklace. It can be worn as a pendant on a chain for a totally different look.”

The Natural Fancy Vivid Yellow Diamond Ring

A rare example of the most sought-after Canary diamonds, the Natural Fancy Vivid Yellow displays outstanding color and clarity for its size (VVS1). The long Emerald Cut is seldom seen in large yellow diamonds, adding even more value to the highly saturated stone.

“Here is a mesmerizing Fancy Vivid Yellow...a bright, sunshine yellow stone from South Africa, exquisitely cut,” said Padulo. “Flanked by a pair of Trapezoid white diamonds, this is once-in-a-lifetime Canary.”

For Collectors, Investors and Connoisseurs

Demand for investment quality Fancy Color Diamonds has never been higher. The rise of this alternative asset class has been documented by prestigious financial journals and record-breaking auction sales around the world.

According to Christie’s International Head of Jewelry, Rahul Kadakia, “Over the past 10 years Fancy Color Diamonds have jumped tenfold. What was then $200,000 per carat can easily be worth $2 million per carat today...and more.”
