The “La Lavande” Argyle Bracelet features 3.67 carats of ultra-rare blue, gray and violet diamonds from Australia’s legendary Argyle Mine. “The Velvet Blue” Ring centers on an extraordinarily rare 1.50-carat Natural Fancy Deep Blue diamond from a private collection in South Africa. ### La Lavande Argyle Blue and Violet Diamond Bracelet

The custom “antique look” platinum and 18K bracelet is designed in a zig-zag pattern with 10 alternating oval and round Argyle center stones, surrounded by more Argyle round blue diamonds and round white diamonds.

The Argyle diamonds are graded Fancy Grayish Blue, Fancy Blue-Gray, Fancy Dark Bluish Gray, Fancy Dark Gray-Violet, and Fancy Gray-Violet. The total weight of the Argyle diamonds is 3.67 carats. The total weight of the white diamonds is 6.58 carats.

“The Argyle Mine is the only known source of these rich violets and cornflower blues,” said Joe Padulo, CEO of Padulo Privé and a consultant to high-end jewelers and luxury brands.

“They are discovered so rarely, each is literally a one-in-a-million stone.”

The Velvet Blue Fancy Deep Blue Diamond Ring

An Oval-cut Fancy Deep Blue diamond of remarkable clarity (VVS2) takes center stage in this platinum ring. Recently acquired in South Africa, where it had been housed in an important family collection for generations, the blue diamond is flanked by D-Color diamonds totaling 1.40 carats.

“This is an exquisite blue diamond from an important collection in South Africa,” said Padulo. “Master cutters have told us its depth of color has not been seen from the Cullinan Mine in more than 70 years.”

For Collectors, Investors and Connoisseurs

Demand for investment quality Fancy Color Diamonds has never been stronger. The rise of this alternative asset class has been documented in prestigious financial journals and by record-breaking auction sales around the world.

In the last two months alone, a blue diamond has broken the world record price for any gem at auction, and a mismatched pair of blue and pink diamond earrings became the most valuable earrings ever sold.
